Facts about exchange and mobility programmes

Recognition of differences and similarities!
A stay abroad during the vocational education is a defining experience. VET learners develop their technical and language skills and learn to be interested in and open to other professional and social conventions. This lays the foundation for later exchange activities for personal and professional development.

Enhanced profile of the vocational institution!
The commitment of vocational education institutions to providing exchange experiences creates an attractive and high-quality learning and work environment.

Working together for innovative vocational education!
The exchange of everyday work practices, as well as the shared development of innovative ideas, enhances the quality of vocational education for everyone.
Personalised work experience and professional further education abroad

European mobility programmes for VET learners and recent VET graduates

While learning more about their chosen field, participants have the additional informative experience of living and working in a foreign culture and different vocational education systems. This is an enrichment not only for the participants but also for the teachers, vocational schools and associations involved.

Settling into a daily working life in a new environment is both a challenging and valuable experience. Recognising and mastering these challenges requires self-awareness and an understanding of the local working environment. Participants can apply these insights and capabilities to their own workplace and everyday life upon their return.

Participants: VET learners and recent VET graduates* in dual or full-time education

Applicants: Vocational schools, professional associations, vocational training offices, enterprises and other institutions related to vocational education (public and private)

Activities: Professional internship in a European company, studying at a vocational school with work experience in a company

Project duration: 1 or 2 years
Period of stay: 14 – 360 days per mobility

*May apply to mobility programmes starting up to 12 months after completion of their course
What are the benefits?

Go on a journey of self-discovery
Participants may improve their self-confidence, discover new ways of approaching situations and tackle their personal fears by mastering new situations independently in a new setting.

Improve language skills
There is no greater motivation for improving foreign language skills than being in the country or region where a language is spoken. The rapid improvement in language skills gained during a period abroad is also of great value on a CV.

Add extra value to a professional qualification
Professional horizons are expanded in a professional internship, thanks to the use of new work methods and introduction to a different type of work culture. This experience is also bound to be a bonus on the job market.

Example of a project

As part of the MobiLingua programme, FREI’S Schulen Lucerne and the Canton of Lucerne offers linguistically gifted school graduates the opportunity of doing a three-year business education which includes a six-month professional internship in London during the second year. This fosters both personal and professional skills on the international stage.

“A stay abroad changes you in a positive sense: it makes you more organised, efficient and independent. You return to Switzerland and see the world with new eyes. My expectations were completely fulfilled. My English is now very good. I can now speak and write it perfectly.”

European mobility programmes for VET educational staff

Modern institutions are increasingly realising the value of providing dynamic and engaging professional development for their staff. Carefully selected further education activities enable VET educational staff to exchange valuable experience and knowledge with members of other European educational institutions. Through this hands-on exchange of expertise, VET educational staff can learn about educational management, trends and innovation in the vocational education system of their host country. As well as setting up a partnership with European institutions, a further aim of these mobility projects is that the knowledge acquired abroad will be applied in home institutions.

Participants: Educational staff in the vocational training sector
Applicants: Vocational schools, professional associations, vocational training offices, enterprises and other institutions related to vocational education and training
Activities: Job shadowing, networking, guest lectures, interaction concerning issues of training and further education*
Project duration: 1 or 2 years
Period of stay: 2 days to 60 days per mobility

*Further education courses are excluded from funding
What are the benefits?
Improved technical, didactic and methodological skills
Find out about new teaching and learning methods, aids and work procedures and use the knowledge gained to develop careers further.

Expand and use a network of relationships
Lay the foundation for a common mobility programme structure by meeting vocational training leaders from other European countries.

Example of a project
For prospective or existing vocational school teachers teaching in two languages, the canton of Zurich offers teachers the opportunity to acquire essential methodological, didactic, linguistic and intercultural skills in Great Britain. As part of tailor-made further education programmes, teachers attend various lessons in English colleges and interact with English teachers. They will apply the skills learned in simulated lessons, before transferring these to lessons in Switzerland.

“Participants benefit from interacting in an international, skills-related further training programme with job shadowing. They acquire extra confidence in the language of instruction and can use their skills authentically in bilingual lessons with modern methodology. The VET learners are also pleased about this.”

Example of a project

The Thoune IDM professional education centre is launching an international mobility project in partnership with IBBG (a vocational training community of interest for «clothing creators») for 2018-2020. Eighteen vocational training specialists from all Swiss language regions will have the opportunity to visit one of the leaders in the international textile industry market in Vietnam for three weeks. The main objective will be an exchange of skills and knowledge in the field of vocational training, as well as a deepening of the participants' knowledge of the clothing sector at the production site itself in order to integrate this into the course in Switzerland.
Language assistant programme

Movetia sends young foreign teachers to Swiss vocational schools as support for foreign language courses or bilingual and immersive subject instruction. In turn, by working in schools abroad, Swiss teaching assistants can improve their foreign language knowledge and become acquainted with another educational system.

Swiss vocational schools appoint a language assistant

Participants: Secondary level II schools; also other levels on request
Applicants: School principals
Activities: Assisting with foreign language courses
Appointment: Usually 10 months or 1 school year
Number of hours: 12 hours a week (16 lessons of 45 minutes each)
Salary costs: Charged to the host school

Swiss teaching staff working in a host school abroad

Participants: Teaching staff up to 30 years of age, with max. three years' professional experience
Activities: Assisting with foreign language courses
Appointment: 6 – 9 months (depending on the host country)
Salary costs: Vary according to the host country

Example of a project

Two English-speaking teaching assistants were appointed by the KV Zurich Business SchoolS for the first time in the 2017/2018 school year. The language assistants introduced their culture to the class. Direct access to the foreign language taught by young teachers from abroad was appreciated by VET learners. This approach, which started as an experiment, has proven itself to be successful: the school will appoint language assistants again for the next school year.

“The KV Zürich Business SchoolS teaching staff appreciated the opportunity to involve native speakers in their language or technical courses, because they see them as added value for the students.”

KV Zürich Business SchoolS, Renata Schuh, Team leader of the language assistance programme KVZ
What are the benefits?
Native speakers bring a fresh breeze to the language classroom
Taking current lesson topics from their home countries, language assistants build bridges with students’ everyday environments.

Targeted support of students
Language assistants facilitate lessons with half-sized classes and groups, so that various learning levels can be targeted and met.

Group exchange in Switzerland

Class exchange

Classes from different language regions in Switzerland meet to experience a foreign language learned at school within its culture. Exchanging views, learning new things and sharing experiences with people of the same age: these ingredients are enough to enthuse students from vocational schools for foreign languages.

The sponsorship programme supports class exchanges for mutual visits from primary, secondary and vocational schools and encourages teaching staff to prepare their students for unforgettable exchange experiences.

Participants:  Teaching staff and their VET learners
Applicants:  Teaching staff and school principals in schools in Switzerland or swiss schools abroad
Activities:  Mutual class exchange, joint camp, half-classes and rotation exchange
Project duration:  1 school years
Encounter:  Minimum 2 days (both classes will take a trip for at least 1 day)
What are the benefits?

Using language already acquired
When preparing to meet the other class, students discover that they already know more than they think they do. Their motivation for learning the foreign language increases and they develop communication strategies during the exchange.

Expanding the competencies of teaching staff
Exchanges with colleagues allow teachers to enhance their teaching methods.

Example of a project

René Affolter, a teacher at the Emme learning centre, planned and implemented a five-day bilingual exchange with Romain Degors, a teacher at the Biel vocational educational centre. After one introduction day in Bern, the students discovered Langnau bilingually with their tandem partners. Along the route of a “village obstacle course”, a variety of attractions were visited before a meeting took place with the Langnau ice skating club (SCL Tigers). Bowling, indoor mini-golf, discussions about career plans and other activities were also part of the exchange. This was then followed by a two-day stay in Biel.

“Languages are very important in everyday life. They can open doors to a successful career. Joint games, activities, sports or mealtimes were particularly important to the students.”

René Affolter
Teacher, Emme learning centre
